ANNUAL REPORT ON INDIAN EPIGRAPHY FOR THE YEAR 1949-50

INTRODUCTION

During the year under review as many as 70 copper-plate records were received for examination and 415 stone inscriptions copied. These are given in Lists A and B and are briefly reviewed hereunder.

Copper Plates

Photographs of five sets of plates were obtained in the Goa territory. Of these, two belong to the Bhōjas, a little known dynasty, two to the Kadambas of Goa and one to the Mauryas of Koṅkaṇ. Those of the Bhōjas were issued by king Pṛithivīmallavarman, one (No. 8) from a place called Vṛishibhiṇīkhēṭa in the 1st year of his reign and the other (No. 9) from Pṛithivīparvata in his 25th regnal year. The former registers the gift of the village Bhāgalapallikā in Kupalapakaṭa-āhāra to Mātvāryya, a Brāhmaṇa of the Agnivēśya gōtra, by the king at the request of his brother Śatrudamana, for the merit of his mother Chētasādēvī who is described as Nēllikabālikā. The other registers a gift of land in the village Malāra in Kupalākaṭa-dēśa to Dāmārya of the Bhāradvāja gōṭra. By their palaeography these grants may be assigned to the 6-7th century A.C. Their rings and seals are not forthcoming (Ep. Ind., Vol. XXVI, pp. 338-339). No. 14 from Hire-Gutti in the Kumta taluk of the North Kanara District is yet another charter belonging to the same dynasty and it refers itself to the reign of king Aśaṁkitavarman, but bears no date. However, it may also be assigned on grounds of palaeography to about the 6-7th century A.C. It bears a seal which depicts an elephant, evidently the emblem of the dynasty and it records the gift of a village to a Buddhist vihāra (published in Epigraphia Indica, Volume XXVIII, pp. 70 ff). Charter No. 11 was issued by the Maurya king Anirjjitavarman from his victorious capital Kumāradvīpa. It registers a gift of land, a tank, garden and house-site to Hastyārya of Hārita-gōtra on the 10th day of the 7th fortnight of Hēmanta in the 29th year of the king's reign. This method of recording the date in seasons and fortnights, coupled with the early script, would place the record in the 6th century A.C.

The two Kadamba records (Nos. 12 and 13) are discussed in the sequel.

No. 2 from the Curator, Assam State Museum, Gauhati, said to have been discovered at Dubi, belongs to Bhāskaravarman, the celebrated Bhauma or Naraka king of Prāgjyōtisha and may be considered as an important acquisition of the year. This is the second grant so far known of this king, the first being his Nidhanpur plates (Ep. Ind., Vol. XII, pp. 73 ff.), and it supplies valuable information regarding the early career of the monarch. It is stated that after the death of his father Susthitavarman, while his elder brother Supratishṭhitavarman was on the throne, the brothers had to fight a sanguinary battle against the Gauḍas who invaded their kingdom, defeated them and took them captives but, after a time, repatriated them (ibid., Vol. XXX, No. 47).

No. 1, also from the Curator, Assam State Museum, found at Parvatiya, belongs to king Vanamālavarmadēva of the Mlēchchha-Sālastambha family of Prāgjyōtisha and is again the only extant copper-plate grant known of this king, his other record hitherto known (J. A. S. B., Vol. IX, 1840, pp. 766 f.) being now lost. The present inscription is helpful in that it enables us to correct a number of mistakes that have crept into the history of this family. The capital of the kings of this family, usually believed to have been Hārūppēśvara, is given in the present record as Haḍapēśvara. This record has since been published in Epigraphia Indica, Volume XXIX, pp. 145 ff.

The Kailain plate of Śrīdhāraṇarāta (C. P. No. 5) secured from the Royal Asiatic Society of Bengal, Calcutta, though already published (I. H. Q., Vol. XXIII, p. 221 ff), is worth noticing here as it is an important record revealing the existence of a hitherto unknown royal family of Samataṭa. The grant, issued from Dēvaparvata, records the royal gift of lands in the vishayas of Guptīnāṭana and Paṭalāyikā for expenses of worship and offerings to Buddha, for the maintenance of the Ārya-saṅgha engaged in Buddhist liturgy and for the performance of the pañcha-mahāyajña by Brāhmaṇas. Jīvadhāraṇarāta, father of Śrīdhāraṇarāta, has been identified with Jīvadhāraṇa mentioned as a contemporary of Sāmanta Lōkanātha of the Tipperah plate dated in the year 344, apparently of the Gupta era. Another inscription equally interesting, and received from the same source, is No. 3 found at Tipperah and issued by the Buddhist king Bhavadēva of Dēvaparvata, son of Ānandadēva and grandson of Vīradēva. It records the gift of lands in Vēṇḍamatī in Vāhakakhaṇḍa of Pēranāṭaṇa-vishaya to the Ratnatraya in Vēṇḍamatī-vihārikā by the king on the representation of Mahāsāmantādhipati Nandadhara. The seal of the grant bears the legend Abhinava-Mṛigāṅka, evidently an epithet or surname of the king. See Journ. As. Soc., Letters, Vol. XVII, pp. 83-94.

From the Director of Kannada Research, Dharwar, was secured for examination an interesting set of copper plates discovered at Mudhōḷ in the Karnāṭak area of the Bombay State (No. 7). The set consists of only two plates with ring and seal. Its characters belonging to the Southern class evince archaic features with small box-heads as in sóme early Kadamba copper-plate records. The record is in Sanskrit and it registers a grant of land in Maḷakēṭaka to god Vārāhīdēvasvāmin by king Pūgavarman alias Raṇashṭātura, the eldest son of Pṛithivīvallabha-Mahārāja who is said to have performed the Agnishṭōma, Agnichayana, Vājapēya and Aśvamēdha sacrifices. The dynasty to which the king belonged is not known, nor is the record dated. But on palaeographic considerations it may be assigned to the middle of the 6th centruy A.C.

A charter of the Pallava king Narasiṁhavarman II (No. 56) was received for examination from the Director, Śrī Veṅkaṭēśvara Oriental Institute, Tirupati. The document is in Sanskrit language, engraved in well developed characters of the early Telugu-Kannaḍa alphabet and registers a royal grant of the village Rēyūru situated to the north of Asidhārāpura in Mēl-Muṇḍarāshṭra to the learned Brāhmaṇa Kumāra Maṇḍaśarman of Rāthītara-gōtra and Āpastamba-sūtra and a resident of Kuravaśrī. The details of the date of the grant, viz., 12th year Vaiśākha, Paurṇamāsī, lunar eclipse, would yield 711 A.C. as the date of the charter. The king is described as the son of Paramēśvaravarman and grandson of Mahēndravarman and bears the epithets Paramabhāgavata, Paramamāhēśvara and Paramabrahmaṇya. The executor of the grant was Nandakuṟṟa-Nṛipēśvara. This is the only copper-plate grant known of this king. The seal of the plates bears a well executed bull, the Pallava emblem. The record is published in Epigraphia Indica, Vol. XXIX, pages 89 ff.

Copper-plate No. 17 discovered in the village of Sangalooda in the Akola District, Madhya Pradesh, is another important charter in the year's collection. It belongs to the early Rāshṭrakūṭa dynasty of Vidarbha (Berar) and consists of three plates held together by a ring bearing a seal containing the legend Śrī-Ju(Yu)[ddhā]suraḥ. The charter, issued by king Nannarāja alias Yuddhāsura from his capital Padmanagara in the Śaka year 615, Kārttika, śu. di Paurṇamāsī, records grant of lands in the villages Umbarikā and Vaṭapuraka to Haragaṇa-Dvivēdin, a son of Bhūtagaṇa-bhaṭṭa, grandson of Varmmullaka-Chaturvēdin of Vārula-gōtra, Kauśika-pravara and Taittirīya-charaṇa, who was a resident of Tagara and was running a feeding house (anivārita-annasattra). The king's genealogy is traced as follows: Durgarāja of the Rāshṭrakūṭa family, his son Gōvindarāja, a victor in many battles, his son Svāmikarāja, his son Nannarāja alias Yuddhāsura who is described as paramabrahmaṇya and paramabhāgavata. The Tiwarkhēḍ plates and the Multāi plates of Nannarāja also contain the same genealogy as the one given in the present grant. The first of these two charters is dated Śaka 553 and the second Śaka 631. The disparity in the dates of the two records purporting to belong to one and the same king gave room for doubting the correctness of either or both of these dates. The discovery of the present charter whose date falls close to that of the Multāi plates and whose text also is identical up to the mention of Nannarāja with that of the same plates, would attest to the correctness of the date of the Multāi plates, namely Śaka 631. Consequently the date Śaka 553 of the Tiwarkhēḍ plates appears to be a mistake for some other date. It would therefore follow that Nannarāja ruled from Śaka 615 up to at least Śaka 631. The grant is published in Epigraphia Indica., Vol. XXIX, pp. 109 ff.

Nos. 57 and 58 secured from the Karandai Tamil Sangam at Karuntaṭṭāṅguḍi near Tanjore are a unique discovery of the year both for their size and bulk as well as for their historical importance. They consist of 57 plates each measuring 16·5″ by 9·2″ and two massive rings about 1″ thick and bearing circular seals of the Chōḷa emperor Rājēndra-Chōḷa I. One of the rings is broken on both sides of the seal and the other which is complete was already cut when the plates were secured for examination. Of the 57 plates, 55 seem to form one complete set while the remaining two represent all that is left of the other. The plates are reported to have been unearthed in a field in the village of Puttūr about a mile from the Ammapet railway station in the District of Tanjore. According to the owner of the land, Mr. Sevu Pandiyan, they were found sixty or seventy years ago and had since been in the possession of his family. The Karandai Tamil Sangam having learnt about the existence of these plates, secured them through the good offices of Mr. S. A. Sambasivam, the Firka Development Officer of Tanjore. The 55 plates forming a set weigh without the ring, 8645 tolas or 216 pounds and 2 ounces, nearly 700 tolas or 16 pounds more than the Tiruvālaṅgāḍu plates, also of Rājēndra-Chōḷa I, which, weighing together with the ring only 7980 tolas or 199½ pounds, were hitherto considered to be the heaviest of copper-plate charters.

The 55 plates of the complete set are in three groups or sections ; the first comprising the first three plates recounts the king's genealogy in Sanskrit verses written in Grantha and records the gift of the village Tribhuvanamahādēvī-agrahāra to Brāhmaṇas by the king in the 8th year of his reign. The last verse and a closing sentence of this section mention the names Nārāyaṇa, the poet and Tribhuvanamahādēvī-Mahāchārya and Rājēndrasiṁha-Pērāchārya, the composer and the engravers respectively of the grant. The second section comprising the next 22 plates which are numbered independently of the first three, contain the details of the lands included in the gift village here referred to as Tribhuvanamahādēvi-chaturvēdimaṅgalam. This part is written in Tamil and the king, referred to here by his title Kōnēriṉmaikoṇḍān, is introduced by his well-known praśasti commencing with Tirumaṇṇivaḷara, etc., after which the details connected with the gift village are given. This section cites the 8th year and the 107th day of the king's reign. The third section of 30 plates which are also numbered independently of the previous two sections forms the third and the final section of the document and contains the list of the names of the donees. The 55 plates comprising the three sections thus form but one document which, in its general get-up, resembles the other copper-plate charters of the Tamil country, particularly the Leiden grant and the Tiruvālaṅgāḍu plates.

The remaining two of the 57 plates are obviously stray leaves. One of them is numbered 21 and the other 22 and they contain a portion of a list of the donees in Tamil. It may therefore be presumed that there was another equally bulky copper-plate charter of which we have only the two leaves and a seal available, the rest of the document having now been lost. Both the seals are massive and circular, about 5″ across in diameter and depict in high relief the Chōḷa emblems on a countersunk surface. A Sanskrit verse in Anushṭubh is embossed in Grantha characters circumscribing the emblems. The verse, identical in both the seals, states that the grants are of Parakēsarivarman Rājēndra-Chōḷa (I). The present grant is the second copper-plate charter of Rājēndra-Chōḷa I, his first being the Tiruvālaṅgāḍu plates already referred to. While the latter is dated in the 6th regnal year of the king, the present one is two years later and belongs to the 8th year of his reign.

Reverting to the Sanskrit section of the record, it describes the genealogy of the Chōḷa family up to Rājendra-Chōḷa I as in the Tiruvālaṅgāḍu plates, but remarkably enough, the verses are all different though the composer of both the grants was one and the same person namely Nārāyaṇa, son of Śaṅkara. However, it may be seen that some of the verses of the present grant are the same as those found in the Leiden plates of Rājarāja I, father of Rājēndra I, which, it may be observed, were composed by Anantanārāyaṇa of Kōṭṭaiyūr. This part of the present charter is important as it furnishes some hitherto unknown facts pertaining to Chōḷa history. For instance, we learn from it for the first time that among the kings conquered by Parāntaka I, there was one Pallava ruler. Hitherto it was believed that Āditya I, the father of Parāntaka I, had liquidated the Pallava power by defeating Pallava Aparājita and annexing his kingdom. The mention of a Pallava chief in this charter as a foe of Parāntaka as well would indicate that either the latter helped his father in defeating the Pallava ruler or that the Pallava resistance continued even up to the time of Parāntaka I who had to deal the final blow to that power, probably by overthrowing Pallava Nṛipatuṅgavarman in or about 910-11 A. C. Of Parāntaka II (Sundara-Chōḷa), the praśasti states that he made the powerful Vīra-Pāṇḍya flee to the Sahya mountains. That Vīra-Paṇḍya was killed by Āditya II, son of Parāntaka II, is well known. The facts revealed by the present account seem therefore to show that both the father and the son fought a common foe. Of Rājarāja I, son of Parāntaka II, we are told, perhaps for the first time, that among his numerous adversaries, there was a Bāṇa chief who was defeated and a certain Bhōgadēva whose head was cut off. What necessitated Rājarāja I to fight the Bāṇas who had already been completely subjugated by Parāntaka I several decades earlier is not known. There were a few Bāṇa chiefs at this period who figured independently without mentioning any overlord. One of them was Aggapa whose inscription dated Śaka 930 (=1008 A. C.) is found at Sannamūru in the Podili taluk, Nellore District. Whether it was these Bāṇas of the Telugu country with whom Rājarāja I had to wage a war is not certain. The identity of Bhōgadēva also remains doubtful. It is a common name among the chiefs of the Telugu-Chōḍa family. Rājarāja is known to have defeated the Telugu-Chōḍa chief Bhīma and perhaps killed him too. But Chōḍa-Bhīma is not known to have had the surname Bhōgadēva and therefore it is by no means certain if the two were one and the same.

Of Rājendra-Chōḷa I, the donor of the grant, the first notable event of the reign recorded is that the king of Kāmbōja sent his chariot as a present to the Chōḷa monarch in order to win the latter's friendship and thereby save his own kingdom. Apparently Kāmbōja here stands for Cambodia in the Far East and not Kāmbhōja in the north-west of India as the Chōḷas are not known to have ever gone so far to the north-west. As the Chōḷa king's expedition to Kaṭāha, i.e., Kedah in the Malay Peninsula, is referred to further in the present account, the Kāmbōja ruler figuring here is possibly different from the Śailēndra king of Kaṭāha. Another noteworthy fact related is that Rājēndra-Chōḷa proceeded against Mānyakhēṭa in order to fulfil his father's vow that he would have no respite until he captured that city. Obviously Rājarāja I died without realising his aim which his son Rājēndra did succeed in achieving, for the praśasti says that he burnt down the city. The succeeding verses describe the king's well-known conquests of Siṁhaḷa, Kaḍāha and Kēraḷa as well as his Gangetic expedition.

A noteworthy fact of the Sanskrit section is that although it cites the 8th regnal year of the king (=1020 A. C.), as does the Tamil portion of the record, it mentions, like the Tiruvālaṅgāḍu and the Leiden plates, some of his conquests which he must have achieved much later than the 8th year of his reign, as, for instance, his Gangetic expedition and the Kaṭāha campaign (c. 1025 A.C.). It would therefore appear that, as in the case of the Leiden and the Tiruvālaṅgaḍu plates, the Sanskrit portion of the grant was composed much later and added on to the deed in Tamil.

After the eulogy follows the statement that while camping at Vyāghrāgrahāra, i.e., Chidambaram, the king made a gift of Tribhuvanamahādēvi-agrahāra, named after his royal mother, and made up of a number of villages and situated in Vīrachōḷa-vaḷarāshṭra, to a thousand and eighty Brāhmaṇas. The vijñapti of the record was the king's minister Jananātha. The chief administrative head of the agrahāra granted was Nārāyaṇa of Kṛishṇapura who is described as a very learned Brāhamaṇa, and a yajvan. The composer of the praśasti was Nārāyaṇa, son of Śaṅkarārya, a resident of Pārśvagrāma. As already remarked, Nārāyaṇa was the composer of the Tiruvālaṅgāḍu plates also. The Sanskrit section concludes with the mention of the engravers Tribhuvanamahādēvī-Mahāchārya and Rājēndrasiṁha-Pērāchārya.

The Tamil portion of the grant opens with the royal command addressed to the officials and others on the 107th day of the 8th year of the king's reign announcing the gift of the village Tribhuvanamahādēvi-chaturvēdimaṅgalam from his seat in the hall (maṇḍapa) called Rājēndrachōḷa-Brahmādhirājan in his camp at Perumbaṟṟappuliyūr, i.e., Chidambaram. The villages which were grouped to form the agrahāra are then enumerated, specifying the lands demarcated in each of them for the purpose. Then follows the statement that the gift was duly registered in the presence of a number of officers, on the 110th day of the same year. The king, here called Parakēsarivarman Rājēndra-Chōḷadēva, is then introduced with his well-known short eulogy which commences with the words Tirumaṇṇivaḷara and stops with the mention of his conquest of Śāndimattīvu. As eulogies or the meykkīrttis usually limit the description of a king's conquests to the date of his particular grant or record, and as the conquest of Śāndimattīvu finds mention already in records of the king's 7th regnal year, it may not be wrong to conclude that between the 7th and the 8th years of his reign no further victories were achieved by king Rājēndra-Chōḷa. The grant further on states that the various officials of the districts received the king's order directing them to demarcate the boundaries of the agrahāra by circumambulating the she-elephant along its limits. Then follows the detailed description of the boundaries. After the completion of this ceremonial fixation of the boundaries, the gift village was declared a brahmadēya with effect from the same year of the king's reign. The necessary entries to the effect were made in the registers and the document handed over on the 380th day. The charter closes with the names of the officers who affixed their signatures and of those who gave their approval to the deed.

The last section of the document consisting of 30 plates contains the list of names of the donees specifying their places of residence, their gōtras and sūtras as well as the shares which each of them got.

Copper-plate No. 12 belongs to king Shashṭhadēva II of the Kadamba family and is dated Kali 4357 (in words), 8th year of the king's reign, Durmati, Pushya, amāvasyā, Saturday. It registers the gift of the village Gāḍivaṟe situated in Ajjagāve-kampaṇa of Panasa-dēśa to Lakshmīdhara and his brothers, sons of the astronomer Lōkaṇa. The gift was made in the presence of god Mahābalēśvara of Gōkarṇa. The record gives the genealogy of the family of the Kadambas of Goa for nine generations from Gūhalla down to the donor Shashṭhadēva (II). The Kali and cyclic years cited in the record do not tally although the details of the date quoted with the cyclic year Durmati work out correctly to 1262 A.C., January 21, Saturday. A similar discrepancy is observed between the Kali and the cyclic years quoted in the only other dated copper-plate grant of this king (Ind. Ant., Vol. XVII, p. 300) in which again the details of date given for the cyclic year work out correctly. In the case of the latter record, Fleet was inclined to take the Kali year quoted as the one from which the king counted his regnal years. But the Kali year cited in the grant under review is nine years later than that quoted in the other, and so if the Kali year cited in this grant is also considered as marking the initial year of the king's reign, we have two different dates from which this king counted his regnal year, viz., 1246 A.C. (Kali 4348) and 1255 A.C. (Kali 4357). A later record of this chief belonging to 1264 A.C. (ARSIE, No. 447 of 1926) describes him as a subordinate of the Yādava king Mahādēva. As the grant under review, which is two years earlier than the stone inscription cited above, was issued by the chief in an independent capacity, he appears to have been subjugated by the Yādavas sometime between 1262 and 1264 A.C. The seal affixed to the ring of the plates bears the name of the king as well as the figure of a lion which was the emblem of the dynasty.

No. 13 is another Kadamba grant belonging to the reign of Tribhuvanamalla, son of Jayakēśin and grandson of Shashṭhadēva (I), ruling from his capital Gōpaka (Goa). It is dated Śaka 1028, Vyaya, Phālguṇa, śu, di. 13, Thursday = 1107 A.C., February 7, and registers gift of lands, gardens and house in different localities by Kēlivarman, an officer of the king, to twelve Brāhmaṇas. The donor Kēlivarman is stated to be the son of Nāgaṇa and grandson of Kālapa who were respectively the officers under Jayakēśin (I) and Shashṭhadēva (I). We know of two sons of Jayakēśin I whose names were Gūvaladēva and Vijayāditya, of whom the former had the biruda or surname Tribhuvanamalla.

Trivhuvanamalla of the present charter may therefore be identified with Gūvaladēva, the eldest son of Jayakēśin I (published Ep. Ind., Vol. XXX, p. 71).

No. 16 received for examination through the Collector of South Satara and now preserved in the Museum at Sangli belongs to king Kṛishṇadēvarāya of Vijayanagara and is dated Śaka 1434, Aṅgirasa, (=1512. A.C.). It records the gift by the king of the village Niṭāla renamed Kṛishṇarāyapura, situated in the Kopaṇa-sīma in Paḍuva-nāḍaka, a sub-division of Hastināvati-rājya to Timmājyōtisha of Arsīkere as sarvamānya-agrahāra. Kopaṇa-sīma corresponds to the region around Kopbal in the Raichur District in the Hyderabad State, north of the Tuṅgabhadrā. That this region formed part of the Vijayanagara kingdom during this period is learnt from the present record which refers to the kingdom of Vijayanagara as Hastināvati-rājya, Hastināvati evidently standing for Ānegondi near Hampi (Vijayanagara).

No. 59 from Bellary in the Madras state belongs to king Adil Shāh of Bijāpur and is dated Śaka 1596, Ānanda which corresponds to 1674. A.C. The inscription states that while Adil Shāh Pādshāh was ruling the country from Penugoṇḍa and while Abdul Hussain Sāhib was administering the region on behalf of the Pādshāh, a deed conferring the right of collecting some dues from the Vaiśya community was executed under the orders of the ruler in favour of Bhūpatyāchārya, son of Bhāskara Paṇḍita the high priest of the Vaiśya community as against Kṛishṇaya who claimed the same right. On the date cited in the record, the ruler of Bijāpur was Sikandar Adil Shāh, a boy of seven years. That on this date the authority of the Nawab of Bijāpur extended south as far as Penugoṇḍa in the Anantapur Distict is attested by the present record. This is noteworthy, as not long after this date, the Marāṭhā chief Śivāji overran this country, and raided the southern regions as far as Tanjore in or before 1677 A. C.

From Pondicherry was received a curious bronze plaque, the obverse of which contains sculptures in seven rows depicting several gods and goddesses and some artisan tools. The reverse of the plaque contains an inscription (No. 55) in Telugu which registers an agreement between two disputing artisan communities. The disputants are said to have come to an agreement in the presence of a certain Ḍakaṇāchāri who bears a number of interesting epithets such as the 'lord of Pendōlupura', devotee of the goddess Kāḷikādēvī and Kamaṭhēśvara, etc. The sculptured panels on the obverse of the plate evidently represent these deities and the artisan tools, the emblems of the communities. The inscription is not dated but may be referred to the 16th or 17th century A.C. on palaeographical grounds.

Stone Inscriptions

Of the 415 stone inscriptions copied during the year the more important are reviewed below.

From the caves at Kaṇhēri, Bombay State, 38 inscriptions were copied. Of these 24 have been already published and, of the remaining, an inscription in Sanskrit may be noticed here. It is in cave No. 11 and is a long record of 16 lines composed mostly in verse (No. 169). The characters belong to the southern alphabet of about the 5th century A.C. The epigraph which is damaged seems to record the grant of a village to the community of Buddhist monks. Mention is made of Kṛishṇaśaila, i.e., Kaṇhēri, Dramiḷa and a Buddhist monk named Kumāraguru. The existence of this inscription has been noticed previously though it was not read (Lüder's List, No. 997). Just below this is another Sanskrit inscription in Nāgarī characters of about the 8th-9th century A.C. (No. 170). It consists of two lines and mentions Kṛishṇagiri-mahāvihāra.

An inscription engraved on a sculptured slab was discovered at Sāṅgsi in the Kolhapur District (No. 140). The sculptures represent a lady of high rank attended by followers and lying on a funeral pyre in flames. The characters which are box-headed belong to the southern class of alphabets. The language is Sanskrit. The epigraph which consists of a single verse in the Sārdūlavikrīḍita metre records the death of a queen by name Hālidēvī who died young and the setting up of the memorial stélé by her husband out of affection for her. His name, however, is lost. Palaeographically the epigraph may be assigned to the 5th-6th century A.C. This is a rare instance of commemorating the death of a lady by her husband and the exquisite figures carved on the stone give an idea of the excellence which the sculptor's art had reached at this early period in the Deccan region. The epigraph has since been published in Epigraphia Indica, Vol. XXVIII, pp. 129 ff.

At Byāgavāḍi in the Hangal taluk, Dharwar District, Bombay State, was found an inscription of the reign of Vikramāditya who may be identified with Vikramāditya II (733-44 A.C.) of the early Chālukya house of Bādāmi (No. 78). The epigraph is much damaged and seems to record the remission of a certain cess.

An inscription of the reign of Jayasiṁha Jagadēkamalla I of the Western Chālukya family of Kalyāṇa was found at Uphuṇasi in the Hangal taluk, Dharwar District (No. 128). It is dated Śaka 950, Vibhava, Pausha śu. 5, Monday, Uttarāyaṇa-saṁkrānti, corresponding to 1028 A.C., December 23. The epigraph registers a land-grant made to a temple by Kundabbarasi who was associated in the administration with her husband Mahāmaṇḍalēśvara Kundarāja. This Kundarāja, described as the 'son' of Iṛivabeḍaṅgadēva, was governing the province of Banavāse-12000 extending to the limits of Payve-nāḍu. This officer who is also known as Kundarasa and Kundamarasa figures, in like manner, in a few more inscriptions of the period and he is generally taken to be the son of the emperor Iṛivabeḍaṅga Satyāśraya, though not specifically mentioned as such in the genealogical accounts of the Chālukya dynasty. Kundabbarasi appears to be another wife of the chief; for it is already known that he had a wife named Jōgabbe (A. S. I. An. Rep., 1929-30, p. 173).

A composite inscription in Nāgarī characters and Sanskrit language was found at Halsi in the Khānāpur taluk of the Belgaum District, Bombay State (No. 72). The earlier grant registers a gift of the village Sindavaḷḷi situated in the Kālagiri kampaṇa of Palasīdēśa for the worship, etc., in the temple of god Narasiṁha founded at Palasī by Maṭāyōgi. The donor was king Śivachitta Paramardi, son of Jayakēśin II of the Kadamba family of Goa. The epigraph is dated the 23rd regnal year corresponding to the Kali year 4270, Virōdhin, Āshāḍha amāvāsyā, Thursday, Dakshiṇāyana-saṁkrānti, which is equal to 1169 A.C., June 26. The later record is dated two years later in the 25th year of the reign of the same prince. It states that Vishṇuchitta, younger brother of the king, made a gift of certain specified fields and rows of houses in the village Bhalikā for worship, etc., of the same god. These inscriptions have been published, though imperfectly, in JBBRAS, Vol. IX, pp. 278 ff.

From Mēthī, Dhulia District, Bombay State, comes an inscription (No. 137) recounting the genealogy of the Yādava kings of Dēvagiri. It is composed in Sanskrit verse, the script being Nāgarī. It introduces Kṛishṇa after mentioning Siṅghaṇa and Jaitrapāla II. The date of the record is Śaka 1176, Ānanda (1254 A.C.). The object of the record is the endowment of the village Kurukavāṭaka by the king. Half of the income derived from the village was to be utilised for conducting the worship, offerings, etc., of god Bhadrahari and the other half was assigned to the Brāhmaṇas. The record has since been published in Epigraphia Indica, Vol. XXVIII, pp. 312 ff.

In the temple of Nāgēśa in the Goa territory was copied an inscription written in the Nāgarī script and Marāṭhī language (No. 194). It belongs to the reign of the Vijayanagara king Dēvarāya I and states that his provincial officer Naṁjaṁṇa Gōsāvi was administering the region from his headquarters at Gōvā. The epigraph is dated Śaka 1335, Vijaya, Pushya ba. 30, ardhōdaya-puṇyakāla, Sunday, corresponding to 1414 A.C., January 21. The record enumerates the details of the provision made through the agency of Māi Śēṇavai for the conduct of various rituals to the deities Nāganātha and Mahālakshmī. This provincial officer whose Kannaḍa name is incidentally noteworthy was not known previously.

In the States of West Bengal, Bihar and Orissa were copied a number of inscriptions. Of these a few found at Jājpur and its vicinity may be noticed. One of them discovered amidst the ruins of the Haṁsēśvara temple at Śiva dāsapura near Jājpur (No. 403), mentions the early Bhauma-Kara king Śubhākara and his queen Mādhavadēvī. Although it is believed that the Bhauma-Karas had their capital at Jājpur or its vicinity, the present record is the only inscription of the family discovered within the limits of Jājpur. Another inscription engraved on an image of Chāmuṇḍā near Jājpur (No. 401) mentions queen Vatsadēvī who might have been the wife of an early member of the same royal family. These two inscriptions have been published in Epigraphia Indica, Volume XXVIII, pages 179 ff. Another inscription (No. 405) is engraved on a pillar in the compound of the Śiva temple in a locality called Siddhēśvar near Jājpur. This record bears a date in the 19th Anka year of the Eastern Gaṅga king Narasimha IV corresponding to 1394 A.C. The importance of the inscription lies in the fact that it is one of the early records written in the Oriya language and script. This has also been published in Epigraphia Indica, Vol. XXIX, pp. 105 ff. At the village of Valgūdar in the Monghyr District, Bihar, were discovered three inscriptions on pedestals of images (Nos. 42-43.) which record that the images in question were installed at the city of Kṛimilā. This ancient city must have been the headquarters of the vishaya of Kṛimilā mentioned in some records from Nālandā and elsewhere. The inscriptions prove beyond doubt that the present village of Valgūdar, their find-place, represents the site on which the city of Kṛimilā stood. An inscription on the stone image of a goddess called Puṇḍēśvarī at Rājaunā (No. 19) states that the image in question was installed in the 13th regnal year of king Nayapāla (c. 1038-55 A.C.) of the Pāla dynasty of Bengal and Bihar. It may be recalled that an inscription from the same place on a stone slab depicting the Dvādaśādityas was noticed in ARIE for 1947-48, p. 2. It is interesting to note that the inscriptions speak of the installation of the Dvādaśāditya slab and the Dēvī image at Kṛimilā. It is difficult to say whether the site of the ancient city of Kṛimilā included the present village Rājaunā near Valgūdar or that the two inscribed pieces at Rājauna were brought from Valgūdar with which Kṛimilā has to be identified. No. 43 from Valgūdar is dated in the 18th regnal year of king Madanapāla and bears also the Śaka date 1083. This is of exceptional interest throwing light on the hitherto unsettled chronology of the later Pālas. It shows that Madanapāla ruled from Śaka 1066 to 1084, and that he was succeeded by Gōvindapāla whose Gaya inscription dated in V.S. 1232, Vikārin, and in his 14th regnal year, points to his accession in V.S. 1219, i.e., Śaka 1084, which is the year immediately following the year quoted in the Valgūdar record of Madanapāla under review. The three inscriptions from Valgūdar have been published in Epigraphia Indica, Vol. XXVIII, pp. 137 ff.

Several other Pāla inscriptions were found in the same area. Two of these (Nos. 39 and 26) belonging to the reign of Rāmapāla (c. 1077-1120 A.C.), were found at Urēn and Saṁsārpōkhrī (Lakkhisarai) and are dated respectively in the regnal years 14 and 37 of the king. Two more Pāla inscriptions, one (No. 2) of Dēvapāla (c. 810-50 A.C.) and the other of Rāmapāla (No. 1) in the Asutosh Museum, Calcutta University, were probably collected from the same region of Bihar.

A number of stone inscriptions were copied in the Nellore, Guntur, and Kurnool Districts of the Telugu country and in the Districts of Ramanathapuram, Tirunelveli, Madurai and Chingleput in the Tamil area of the Madras State. Of the records collected in the Telugu districts, the earliest, discovered at Turimeḷḷa, Cumbum taluk, Kurnool District (No. 257), belongs to the Western Chālukya king Satyāśraya Vikramāditya and is dated in the second year of his reign. On palaeographical gounds the inscription may be assigned to the middle of the 7th century A.C. and the king identified with Vikramāditya I. The inscription mentions a subordinate chief bearing the epithet Ujjēnī-piśācha and ruling over the territorial division Ēṟuva-vishaya which roughly represents the present Cumbum taluk of the Kurnool District and the northern portions of the Nellore District contiguous to the Kurnool District. The record has been published in Epigraphia Indica, Vol. XXIX, pp. 160 ff. A Kannaḍa record from the same place (No. 277) mentions a king called Indra-Narēndra and his army. The characters of the inscription may be referred to the 10th century A.C. and the king may be identified with Indra III of the Rāshṭrakūṭa family, of whose reign a few inscriptions have been found in the Cuddappah District.

In the Tamil country, Iḷaiyāṅguḍi, famous in Śaiva hagiology as the birthplace of the Tamil saint Māṟa-Nāyaṇār, was visited during the year and a large number of inscriptions copied. But none of them contains any reference to the saint. Nevertheless, the place has yielded some interesting inscriptions. One of them (No. 295) refers to the levy of a certain sum from the residents of Iḷaiyāṅguḍi towards the blackmail to be paid to the Hoysaḷa general Mahāpradhāni Bhōga-Daṇḍanāyaka for immunity against his plundering raids. It is dated in the 20th regnal year of Māṟavarman Sundara Pāṇḍya I, corresponding to 1236 A.C. Another inscription from the same place dated in the 11th year of the reign of Jaṭāvarman Sundara Pāṇḍya (No. 291) discloses the fact that in the previous year there was a famine in the village and that in order to relieve the distress, the residents sold some jewels belonging to the god, Rājēndrachōḷīśvara. In the next year, when normal conditions returned, they restored the ornaments to the deity through the munificence of a certain Śīkāḻi-vēndaṉ who donated 110 paṇam for the purpose. In return for the gift, the villagers agreed to burn a perpetual lamp in the temple. Another instance of the munificence of a Pāṇḍya subordinate is found in a record of the reign of Māṟavarman Kulaśēkhara I (c. 1268-1312 A.C.), engraved on the walls of the Vēṇugōpālasvāmin temple at Iḷaiyāṅguḍi (No. 306). The inscription states that Vāṇādarāyaṉ Kāliṅgarāyaṉ, son of Gaṅgaikoṇḍa Sūryadēvaṉ, constructed a number of temples and maṭhas, instituted many charitable endowments and religious services in temples and established several agrahāras at different holy places in the Tamil country, viz., Perumbaṟṟappuliyūr, Śrīraṅgam, Tiruvānaikkā, Tiruviḍaimarudūr, Madurai, Teṉkarai, Tirukkāṉappēr, Tuvvūr, Maṇali, Śrīvallamaṅgalam, Tirunelvēli Brahmadēśam, Sēravaṉmahādēvī, Śrīvallipputtūr, Tiruttaṅgālūr, Vallār-āṟṟaṅgarai, Tirukkuṟuṅguḍi, Vaḷḷiyūr, Tiruvanantapuram and Iḷaiyāṅguḍi. The donations were made not only to secure religious merit for himself but also for his overlord, Kulaśēkharadēva, and his son, prince Vīra-Pāṇḍya, and for his own parents, brothers and wife.

At Kāyalpaṭṭaṇam in the Tiruchchendur taluk, a number of Arabic and Tamil inscriptions were copied. They are mostly tomb-stone inscriptions recording the death and burial of some persons of local importance. They bear dates in the Hijra era and belong to the 16th century A.C. However, the place has yielded one Pāṇḍya inscription (No. 390) of the reign of Kulaśēkhara (13th-14th century A.C.), which is of importance inasmuch as it establishes the antiquity of the place. The record which has been secured from a Muhammadan graveyard called Kaṟpuḍaiyārpaḷḷi is unfortunately damaged. It registers a gift of two achchu for burning a perpetual lamp, evidently in a temple at Kāyalpaṭṭaṇam.

From Paṇambūru in the South Kanara District, comes an inscription (No. 227) which refers itself to the reign of the Āḷupa king Baṁkidēva who bore the title Pāṇḍyachakravarti. It is dated Śaka 1227, Viśvāvasu, (1305 A.C.). The epigraph, which is in Kannaḍa, registers a gift of land at the village of Hanumbūru which was a brahmadēya endowment to the Śaiva teacher Nāgaśivaśaivāchārya, for offerings to the god Nagarēśvara Gaṇapati. Baṁkidēva is known from other inscriptions copied in the same area (vide An. Rep. on S. I. Epigraphy, 1901, part ii, para. 8, and 1931, part ii, para. 28).
